MR. BLAIR PROTESTS AGAINST THE PASSAGE OF "TUPENNY" BILLS,

While Mr. Teller Thinks the Elections Bill Was Not of Very Great Import-ance—Mr. Hoar Tries to Have a Time to Vote Fixed.

SENATE.

Mr. Quay this morning called up in the Senate a bill to sell the old custom-house

Senate a bill to sell the old custom-house at Eric, Pa. This insignificant measure precipitated a warm discussion between Messrs. Blair and Teller.

Mr. Blair said the Senate was wasting two hours aday on "tupenny" bills. What did it matter when this bill passed? Whether this year, last year or next year. There are important matters demanding the attention of the Senate—the Elections bill, the Silver bill and the Labor bills. The Senate, he said, should change its rules so it could do something if it took all winter. Then, at least, a succeeding Senate could do something.

Mr. Teller thought the subject now engrossing the attention of the Senate (the Election bill) was not of as much importance as some other matters. Besides, he was tired of listening to Mr. Blair lecture to S. the Senate, anyway.

He thought that duty might be safely left to the penny-a-liners. Mr. Blair could call the labor bills up whenever he wanted to as matters were, and if he wanted the rules changed he (Blair) should move in that direction.

rules changed he (Blair) should move in that direction.

When the question of changing the rules comes up he (Teller) would be ready to vote for or against the change, but he declined to say which way.

The bill was passed.

Mr. Hoar then attempted to have debate on the Elections bill declared closed on Friday next at 5 p. m., but was met with a storm of objections from the Democratic side.

Mr. Hoar—I would like to inquire what Senator objected?

Senator objected?

Mr. Cockrell—I did, for one.

Mr. Hoar—Will the Senator agree upon Mr. Cockrell—Not now.

The Senate then took up the Elections bill, Mr. Dolph continuing his speech.

HOUSE. In the House the journal was approved after some delay in securing a quorum and the Apportionment bill taken up. Mr. Flower presented the claims of New York city for a census recount.

THE POSTOFFICE SITE.

The Hearing in the Condemnation Pro-ceedings Before the Court. The application of the Secretary of the Freasury to the Supreme Court of the District came up for consideration in the General Term this morning. The Gov-

General Term this morning. The Government was represented by Mr. Randolp 1 Coyle, while a large array of lawyers a pared for the various parties interested in the property to be condemned. Among these were Messrs. Albert, Mattingly, Perry, Garnett, Cook, Morris and others.

The question under discussion was the instructions to be given by the Court to the three commissioners heretofore appointed to assess damages, to guide them in their labors. Several difficult propositions were presented touching.

1st. The standard of valuation.

2d. The proper method of distribution of an award, as between an owner and his lessees, where any of the property is under

2d. The proper method of distribution of an award, as between an owner and his lessees, where any of the property is under lease.

2d. Whether the Government should pay for the alleys laid out in 1839, and to whom the money therefor should be paid. Over the first proposition there was no serious confention, it being conceded that the several owners were entitled to be paid for their property according to a valuation based upon the most valuable purposes for which it can be utilized. According to this measure of damages if the property is more valuable for the purposes of a postoffice site than for any other purpose, then the owners shall be paid accordingly. Between the owners of the various properties and their several tenants or lessees there was some conflict. Mr. Coyle contended that there can be but one award as a whole for any piece of property, and that the commissioners must apportion this amount and distribute it among landlord and tenant. According to this, whatever sum is paid to the tenant must be deducted from the total award, the owner of the fee receiving that much less. The proposition led to a long controversy, in which, however, the Government took but little part. The owners of the property contended that the lessees can recover nothing for loss of lusiness, profits or good will, nor for the inconof the property contended that the less-can recover nothing for loss of business, can recover nothing for the incon profits or good will, nor for the inconvenience and expense of moving, and that they can be allowed only for the value of the lease over and above the obligation to pay rent. In other words, if the rent paid was the fair rental value of the property, the lessess could get nothing.

The case was still being argued when our report closed. It partakes somewhat of the Parnell-Davitt contest now progressing in Kilkenny. The Carric hopes that every party in interest will be fully paid for his property, and specifity, so that prompt steps many be taken in the direction of providing the community with proper postoflice facilities.

BURNED IN THE NIGHT.

Senator Gorman's Handsome Country

Residence Destroyed by Fire. Fairview, the beautiful country seat o enator Gorman, in Howard County, Md. four miles from Laurel, is in ashes. terday morning the gilded gables and terday morning the gidded gables and tiled roofing of the quaint octagon-shaped structure glistened in the sunlight and bade welcome to the coming of Mrs. Gor-man and her daughter, who contrary to their usual custom intended spending the holiday season in the country instead of at their handsome residence on K street. It was the intention of the Senator's wife to give an old-fashioned country dance on Christmas Eve, and, in order to make the necessary preparations incident dance on Christmas Eve, and, in order to make the necessary preparations incident to the affair she and Miss Gorman, accom-panied by two female servants, reached Fairview yesterday morning. The day was spent in desorating the rooms with evergreens, holly, and mistletoe. At half-past 10 last night the occupants retired and the house was wrapped in quiet, broken now and then by the bang of a shutter as the high wind swept over the fields and spent its fury against the stout building.

shitter as the high wind swept over the fields and spent its fury against the stout building.

A short time after 2 o'clock this morning Mrs. Gorman was startled from her slumber by a piereing scream of fire that penetrated every room and corridor in the house. Wakening her daughter, who occupied the same apartment, they started for the place from which the sounds emanted. When the staircase leading from the kitchen to the servants' quarters was reached dense clouds of smoke poured up the stairway from the lower story and the two terrified ladies were joined by the servants, one of whom explained that she arose in the night to close the shutters and saw the flames bursting out of the kitchen (over which her bedroom is situated), and she immediately sounded the alarm. The entire party, wrapping themselves in bedelothes, made their escape through the front entrance to the dwelling of a neighbor, a half mile distant, where they witnessed the total destruction of the mansion which was a mass of charred ruins in a short time.

No assistance was available, the nearest joint being Laurel, four miles distant, with which communication was impossible.

WE NUMBER 62,622,250.

The Figures as Given by the Last Census.

Census bulletin No. 16 contains the population of the United States by States and Territories. It gives the official count, 62,622,250 as against 50,155,785 in 1880, and 62,022,250 as against 50,155,783 in 1880, and 38,508,371 in 1870. The figures for 1800 exclude whites in the Indian Territory, Indians on receivations and Alaska. Including these the population would probably reach 63,000,000.

The absolute increase of the population in the ten years last past was 12,481,467, and the percentage of increase was 24,85. The increase between 1870 and 1880 was 11,507,412 and the percentage 30,08.

Thus the absolute increase in the decade between 1880 and 1890 over that of the decade from 1870 to 1880 was 80,055, but the rate of increase has apparently diminished from 30,08 to 24,80 per cent. The Superintendent then enters upon an exhaustive defense of his own figures and work, claiming that the census of 1870 was full of errors and omissions, due to the fact that the Jaw under which it was taken was "clumsy, antiquated and barbarous." rbarous.

William Hamilton Gibson, the writer and artist, has just accepted charge of the Department of Illustration and Design in the New York Institute for Artist-Artisans, in West Twenty-third street. The institute has received several macked demonstrations of the approval in which it is held by men who are interested in the development of the industries of the country upon the lines of art, beauty and usefulness. The Cellege of the City of New York has established six scholarships for the institute course, and General Alexander S. Webb, president of the college, has written to Professor John Ward Struson, the worthy superintendent of the institute saying. "I have been for a long time exceedingly anxious to make a public exhibition of the interest I have in the work that you are doing in creating artistarisans. I have among my young men hard-working, intelligent fellows who desire to pursue the course at your institute, and it is to be hoped that this experiment may meet such success as to induce other citizens to add to this endowment."

PARNELL'S CAUSE WANING.

The Feeling Against the Ex-Leader Much Stronger. Dunlin, Dec. 16.—Dublin, in contrast with Wednesday night's meeting with regard to the great leadership question, is now so calm that it is difficult to believe that the city was recently the scene of such transcendent Parnellite enthusiasm as was described by the press on the oc-casion of Parnell's reception, says the New York Thurs to-day.

casion of Parnell's reception, says the New York Times to-day.

Save in the committee rooms of either party and in the offices of the Freezen and other newspapers, the struggle excites at present little interest. Indeed, considerable misapprehension has been created by the exaggerated reports of the ex-leader's reception in Dublin. Of course, Parnell was acclaimed vociferously by a mob, but it was not mainly a voting mob, nor even so formidable in numbers as we were given to understand. Moreover, the respectable element of the population was wanting.

When Parnell last visited Dublin, five years ago, he was met by a huge procession of trades, bearing enormous banners, and also by a large procession of priests. Both these elements of voting power were conspicuously absent last week. As a promainent Dublin citizen said to me last night, "Parnell can always get a mob when it is not engaged elsewhere."

At this moment the Dublin mob element is engaged elsewhere, in Kilkenny, where Parnell's committee has imported 100 Dublin larikins for purposes of amicable advocacy.

Each day, however, the feeling of the peptilace in favor of Parnell's modifying. Wherever he goes there are cheers for the man from those who as yet ignore what has altered the man's position, but that is the extent of the feeling for him, and each day diminishes its strength.

Parnell's cause is waning with the fighting strength of its leader, which is now almost at its lowest ebb. Parnell will break down physically, if nothing more, before many days have passed.

The last few days, during which he has encountered a hostility to which he is altogether unaccustomed, havethoroughly sapped the strength, born merely of passion and audacity, with which he entered on this painful contest. Against him, through the neighborhood, are arrayed forces with which he never thought to have to compete. The priests are solidly opposed to him, and it is almost needless to emphasize the power wielded by the hierarchy throughout the whole of the district covered by the present campaign. Out of over two hundred priests there is but one who has declared in favor of Parnell and who, from personal friendship, is stanchly fighting for him.

Parnell owes all his present success to his surprising and abnormal terrifying energy, coupled with the fact that the lirish party have no newspaper organ through whose columns to reason with a people who eagerly devour political news. The suppression of Usited Ireland had a great temporary influence on popular sentiment in the rural districts; but now that he result of the e

Miss Gertrude Potter stalked the stage at Hooley's yesterday afternoon in doublet and hose. Miss Potter is the daughter of O. W. Potter. She is an heiress. She is a belle. A thousand persons prominent in society and finance applanded her. Big bouquets with long tails of writhing ribbons rolled at her feet. She doffed her piumed chapsau and smiled and bowed while the curtain sank. But the crowd was not appeased. The big canyass with the clean peasants dancing on it was hoisted again. And then the applause rolled up and bear about her, and crackled long after the curtain had descended and cassell to flutter.

Miss Potter did not appear in her striking costume until the second placet was put on. It was a poetical comedy in one act, and was called "Cupid's Messen, er," laid in the time of Queen Elizabuth of England. The costuming that the English gentry wore in the time of the virgin queen gave Miss Potter the opportunity of displaying her charms in doublet and hore. Anon Miss Potter entered.

Society drew its breath. She wore a doublet of garnet volvet. Hose of the same material, laced like leggings up the side with gold cords, bound her shapely fluibs. A little cape with golden fringe swept her shoulders. Gold braid gloamed brightly all over her doublet. On her curis a knightly cap sat jauntily, with a dashing plume nodding over it, and a sword in a scarlet scabbard clanked at her sectators quivered, but after the first wave of applause curied over the costly bonnets a modest silence was manuained.

Miss Potter was impersonating the part of a courier of a nobleman, and she was playing it exceedingly well. The part titted her. There was a dash of comedy in it, which, with the costume, made it delicious to the Four Hundred. avenue.

in it, which, with the costume, made it delicious to the Four Hundred.

The plot was soon unraveled. Miss Potter told her brother, Sir Philip, that she had a letter from her-or his-lord containing a proposal of marriage to the gentle Miss Walsingham. Immediately Sir Philip got angry and found that he loved her. He and "the boy" were about to fight with swords when Miss Walsingham entered. Sir Philip, after cursing himself for his own backwardness, immediately proposed to Miss Walsingham, the compiracy was revealed, and the curtain cleaved its way through a red cloud of bouquets, while society clapped its gloved hands. The curtain was hoisted again and again, while Miss Potter, in the garnet costume men wore in the sixteenth century, smiled and bowed and bowed and smiled over and over. Her debut as an amateur actress had been a pronounced and artistic success.

smiled over and over. Her debed as an amateur actress had been a pronounced and artistic success.

THE FOREIGN SUITOR.

THE FOREIGN SUITOR.

Why He is Attractive to so Many American Girls.

One reason why American girls wish to marry abroad is that foreigners have, as a rule, a certain enamed of manner which is very attractive to women, says Mrs. John Sherwood in Harper's Buzar. The hand kissing, the flattery, the deferential manmer, all these are the most agreeable beginnings of an acquaintance. It is, to an alle girl, a great pleasure to find a man has all lais day to devote to her. The European man has had no such difficulty in disposing of the golden hours; he has worked hard to make his living he has had a terrific struggle for it and this love-making has been a thing apart, an interlude in the busy life. He hus had no time to enamel himself with foreign manners and to an idle and selfish girl he is far less agreeable than a man who can take her to picture galleries, to races, to the Bois, to dine, who knows all about dressmakers, their prices, their degree of style and their costume.

A European man is a gazette, a newspaper among other things, and he is full of delightful anecdote. He knows all the goesey about the France of Wales, about Lady Agatha and the Duchess of Nowhere, he is selfish in everything else, but he is not selfish in this. He does try to make himself amusing and agreeable, and to do him justice he generally succeeds. If he goes to theater or opera with a party of lades he knows the history—and it is apt to be a piquant one—of every prima donna, every tenor, every basso. He remembers what happened at Nice two winters ago, and he has an amusing story about the Grand Duchess of Fimper-weight of the contractive of the happened at Nice the contractive of the head of the contractive of his man and a greeable contractive of the head of the dressmakers, their prices, their degree of style and their costume.

He remembers what happened at Nice two winters ago, and he has an amusing story about the Grand Duchess of Pimpernickel. We all know that there is no more fascinating reading for the idle and cultivated than the stories in which titles abound. And perhaps, when treated with the genius of "Ouida," they are very good reading for anybody who has nothing else to do.

A Ghost as a Witness. From the London Daily Telegram There was once a "ghost in court," connected with the memorable Belt case nected with the memorable Belt case; since then the phantoms have not troubled the High Court very much. But there is an action pending, all about a will, in which a spectre forms a leading feature; and will possibly be called as a witness. A ghost in the witness box would cause a forensic sensation of the first order, and would "clear the court" more specifiy than the efforts of a dozen ushers. The way in which the phantom "comes in" to this particular case seems to be that the testator, being dissatisfied with his testamentary dispositions, revisited the glimpses of the moon and told the sexton sell about it. "But," Lord Justice Bowen pertinently inquired, "can what a ghost says to a sexton be taken as evidence against anybody? The legal view would be that such testimony required substantial corroboration; but we know from Silas Marne, that ghostesses do not care about being believed by the hopelessly "gnorant."

Yes, he loves you now, 'tis true, Lass with eyes of violet blue, Lips as sweet as honey-dew, Bonny little bride!
Will he love you as to-day, When your bloom has fled away, When your bloom has fled away, When your colden locks are grey—Will his loveablie?
Yes, if it is the true kind, it will survive all the inevitable wastes and changes of life. But it is every woman's desire and duty to retain, as long as she can, the atractions that made her charming and beloved in youth. No one can keep her youthful bloom or equable temper, if weighed down and suffering from female weakness and disorders. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a remedy for these troubles, Sold by druggists.

Reminiscences of Belmont. From the Chicago News.

August Belmont, the noted New Yorker, who died the other day, was related to Carl Wolfsohn, the musician, at 1415 Michigan

"I knew Belmont but slightly," said that gentleman to-day, "although my father and he were great cronies and friends. Belmont was a second-cousin of friends. Belmont was a second coursin of my mother, and came from the same part of the country my folks did. Why, I know, or did know, all his friends then, and all his relations, and, although I was much younger than him, I took an interest in the same things he did.

Belmont was born in Alzei, in Rhemish Hessia. He came to this country when but a young man and secured the lucrative and important position of New York correspondent for the Rothschilds. That was the making of Belmont. He was not an obscure or low-born person, you understand, but came of good, well-to-do folks. That is, as riches were considered then but now his folks would not be reckoned wealthy. Belmont was specessful in all
